Fox,

I never had to go smaller than 26 on that stream for single midges. Size 26 Adams, black, and cream seemed to cover it. I'm surprised that the 24 gn didn't seal the deal, since that worked 90 percent of the time for me in that situation.

The only practical advice I can give is that regardless of what they are eating, they will take an ant as well in a few months. Hell, they may now.

If I'm wrong about this being the stream I think it is, my apologies.

Edit: another point I should make is that the bulk of my fishing there was before it became a zoo, so maybe they are tougher now.
