Fredrick,

I got a good deal on the Mongoose so that's the direction I went. I'm happy with it. Here's the only catch, there's an arm that comes down from the pivot on the post that is rather wide. It's there to allow a sliding material clip, which can be convenient when working with shortish material. The problem is that there's less clearance behind the hook because of the arm, and I've had to get used to that. The jaws can be pivoted up so you have free room behind the hook but then you loose the 360 rotating function. As i say, I have gotten used to it and like the vise a lot. Don't know about the traveller.
