

Subject: : Tips and Tricks

Topic: : "Dapping the undercuts"

Re: "Dapping the undercuts"

Author: : SBecker

Date: : 2012/3/6 23:49:14

URL:

Quote:

Squaretail wrote:

When the need presents itself, I'll do it every time. I call it tule-dipping but that may be an incorrect description. Nothing wrong with it. The object is to catch the fish after all.

My favorite form is when you can sneak up close enough to a fish rising just off the bank and hold your rod out with your dry suspended 2 or 3 inches above the water and watch the fish try and catch it in mid air.

They have all done this multiple times until caught or spooked.

Haha, I had this happen once, but it was not on purpoulus. Fishing a local stream, there was a fish rising on the opposite bank behind a small tree branch. Of course my first cast to him had my Cdc and elk get caught in the branch about a foot off the water. Fish jumped up and grabbed it and could not get off. Had to cross the stream and release the fish from the branch.