

Subject: : Beginner Forum

Topic: : Windy Day Question

Re: Windy Day Question

Author: : djs12354

Date: : 2012/3/12 20:52:50

URL:

Yeah, I was going for the line speed and, by timing to be between the wind gusts, managing to get the casts where I wanted them (or a reasonable facsimile thereof).

I don't think I would have done very well with a dry that day. But held my own with the nymphs. I think the weight of the thingamabobber helped.

Still have so much to learn regarding casting. Spent some time in the yard yesterday, just trying to work on the presentation portion of the cast. Watching the back-cast to be sure I was being patient enough to let it straighten out enough, then powering to the 10 o'clock position.

More time on the water will help, but it looks like I will be lucky to get out on Sunday afternoon this week. I have to head to Ohio and do my mother-in-law's taxes, as well as some other small chores for her.