

Subject: : Stream Reports

Topic: : Valley Creek, Chester County, 3/19/2012

Re: Valley Creek, Chester County, 3/19/2012

Author: : fadeaway263

Date: : 2012/3/21 11:48:35

URL:

Quote:

Fredrick wrote:

Quote:

fadeaway263 wrote:

Personally I do not believe what some of the posters on Valley say what they caught. The Prof and I fished on the 19th and he got one and me zip. That is over 60 years combined experience. We met up with a couple of guys who had 10 more years on us and they were skunked. With the stream so low on the 19th and bright sun and gin clear water not even Lefty could catch 9 fish.

Not sure what you guys are doing wrong Fade but if you guys want some lessons let me know

But I have only been fly fishing for five years

Fred not so sure if it is a lesson thing yet. I think it is more due to the fact that the Prof and I seem to be focusing more on native fish as opposed to the stockies we have fished for over the years. You just can't throw a #12 wooly bugger at the fish in Valley and expect immediate results like you get when fishing a place like Chester Creek. But then again I do just fine when fishing BHPTs for the natives in the Upper Delaware. I guess I just have to resign myself to fishing teeny tiny midges on Valley and leave the big stuff for the other streams.