

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : crappie on the fly? Oh Yea

Re: crappie on the fly? Oh Yea

Author: : iceyguides

Date: : 2012/3/22 9:08:36

URL:

A light fly rod is great for catching crappie. I think it's preferable to the average spinning rod for a few reasons. Its long enough to dabble in tight spots thus avoiding casting. You have the ability to cast very light, very small offerings which i think can be critical when they get picky. Once you get a good cast into the brush you just leave the same amt of line out and the casting is easy.

For flies i like using those little jighead fly things. i know you can get them at cabelas or bass pro. It's just a really small jighead. I like the 1/124 best. Tie some rabbit fur off a zonker strip or marabou on with 2 strands of crystal flash and you're in business.

Panfish are very overlooked in my opinion, especially this time of yr in my part of the state. Most of the trout in this state are panfish sized anyway and you don't hafta cram into crowded special reg areas to catch panfish. Plus they taste great, if you're into that.