Looks like a classic and strong nor-easter. Just too warm for snow.

This is showing that the rain will be mostly eastern PA. Western PA gets the front coming through, but just the fringe of the big daddy that follows it up. As of now, Eastern PA in the bullseye for some heavy rain.

And as always with these things, they do a heck of a job of predicting a storm. How strong it is, how much rain it has, etc. They get that kind of stuff dang near 2 weeks out. But as to the details of WHERE it's going to hit, it's pretty much only a day or two in advance when that becomes certain. Could go west and get western PA in on the rain too. Could go east and rain only on the big pond, leaving us all high and dry.
