Oh, I agree.

Some thunderstorms, for instance, can drop a half of inch of rain in a matter of 20 minutes or something. That runs right off and doesn't soak in hardly at all.

This isn't that kind of storm. If this comes true, this is a nonstop rain for 24 hours type situation.

Yeah, it can come down pretty hard at times. They can dump 3 inches total or something. And it may cause some flooding. But much of it will soak in.

This is one of those that, if it happened in February instead of April, would be 20+ inches of the white stuff for eastern PA.
