

Subject: : Hatch and Entomology Forum

Topic: : Spinner fall

Re: Spinner fall

Author: : DaveS

Date: : 2012/4/19 21:22:44

URL:

I fish the same method as Alby. The except would be I'll use a floating nymph fished in the film on my point and a Sulpher dun for instance, on a dropper, to keep track of the nymph. Any rise form near the Dry is likely to the floating nymph. Then as the light starts to fade, I'll switch the nymph for a spinner. I think most of the big trout I've taken on dries have come on a spent wind during a spinner fall.