The only downside I have from my large arbor, is that frequently the excess line will wrap around the butt of the rod during the forward cast. I hate that.

Uhhh, what would this have to do with the reel being large arbor?

I do not own a large arbor reel, nor a mid arbor. But I cannot understand how the reel would cause this. The line exits the reel at about the same place as a normal reel. Seems to me you'd have this problem with any reel. Like, you're Rod hand and reel must be moving up and down too much.

This happens to me when I get sloppy.
