

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Salt Water Set Up

Re: Salt Water Set Up

Author: : CaptMatt

Date: : 2007/1/16 15:57:04

URL:

Set up sounds great for what you're doing. I would def think about another fly line so as not to mess up your freshwater steelhead line. 8wt rod will work great for most anything you'll fish for in a sound. I fish all wf floating line here in SW Florida along with my other guide buddies. Occasionally when the tarpon are still in deep water an intermediate line works good but other then that we don't use them. Depending on the month you'll be there you most likely see tarpon anyway although I'm not sure how and when they run in and out of NC. If moneys tight get some new line and have at it. Like I said the 8 wt is perfect just change the line to something thats affordable (saltwater and fresh water fly line dont mix). I use a 7wt for most of my fishing and it's a blast. Hope that helped. Good Luck!