

Subject: : Hatch and Entomology Forum

Topic: : Early Brown Stonefly??

Re: Early Brown Stonefly??

Author: : ryguyfi

Date: : 2012/5/1 15:35:50

URL:

I see, according to Troutnut, why you called it a brown, but I'd venture to say it's an early black stonefly. Those are a very typical hatch all across the state and can also be called "snowflies" as they can come off right when the last snow or two happens before spring.

The nymphs will crawl to land and hatch, so much of the adult/dry fly activity is typically along the shorelines.