Barred tails, I do see them on my insect, and considering the other variables I will call it a female Hendrickson, thanks very much for the input.

What really had me convinced it was a BWO was the light colored body. It was hard to see that in some of the photos but the 1st one up above kind of shows it. I didn't see the "quill" look on it at all.

Is it possible that the insect is a light Hendrickson? Sorry for the stupid questions, I'm going to go read up more on light Hendricksons now.
