

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : Should we trust the DEP?

Re: Should we trust the DEP?

Author: : Berks

Date: : 2012/5/10 21:43:16

URL:

Unfortunately for us, rushing things is a critical element to the oil companies business models. They need to be continuously installing new wells to account for the rapid decrease of gas production after the wells are initiated. It's all about maximizing short term profits. If they can't rush, they'll just pack up and take their high paying jobs back down to West Virginia or Wyoming. Or so they say.