With that little bit of a cold spell a few weeks ago that stalled the water temps and even lowered on some streams and then on top of that the high water it made for some difficult days on the water. I had several follows on some of my favorite spots but no takers. With the warmer temps last week it started getting the water temp going in the right direction again and got the toothies active again. I fished a lake sunday with both pike and musky. I missed a fish and ended up catching a really nice Pike proably my best so far about 38 inches. This was my first time fishing a lake for toothies and I must say now I REALLY want a boat. The boat option is nice so when stream levels are too high you can always hit a lake. I forgot my iphone in the car when we were putting gear on the boat so sorry no pics. Fish should be getting really active soon.
