Thanks for the advice. I had been trying to keep the head in the water as I thought bringing the fish head out of the water loses the buoyancy the water provides and exerts more pressure on the hook, causing lost fish.

Since my current technique obviously is not working for me, I'll give this a shot. Kinda funny- although I had some good hookups the other day, the only trout I landed was one that took off when he saw my net and wrapped himself around my legs where I could get him!
