Thanks for posting this Jack. I used to think that "we could have our cake and eat it too" when it comes to Shale Drilling. That, properly utilized and monitored, technology would permit us to get our energy with minimal impact to the environment. After past couple years, I'm not so sure--methane in ground water, fish kills, poor waste treatment, illegal dumping, explosions, and even earthquakes around well sites have filled me with doubt. Regardless how deep the fracking occurs or even how carefully it is done, there is a potential domino effect that may occur, in either leeching or physical shifting of the ground/rock caused by the tremendous forces of the fracking process, and directly impacting our lives in a negative way.
