Turkey, maybe you are right but i have been fishing the hex hatch for 35 years and compared side by side the males may be slightly smaller but not more than maybe 1/4 inch in body length. It is not a size 4 to a size 10. There is no mistaking a hex hatch as either sex competely dwarfs all other mayflies. And I've seen two different colored strains on the same river where one definitely looked like a brown drake on steroids and the other looked more like a mottled sulfur on steroids but they were both yellow hex and both the same size - incredibly huge.
