

---

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Fly Line Preferences

Re: Fly Line Preferences

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2012/6/4 9:58:04

URL:

1. DT. Don't think it makes much difference when casting normal PA type distances. DT for the longevity factor, you can turn em over and use the other side after one side wears out. But it's not a strong preference.
2. No. When they have one I cut it off and tie a nail knot anyway, but no big deal either way.
3. If given the choice, I prefer dark olives and natural colors. I have no problem seeing fly line regardless of color. It probably very rarely makes much difference, and it's not a necessity, but all else being equal I'll take more natural colors out of hope it spooks less fish.

To me, all the floating fly lines cast just fine, I haven't really noticed differences. The biggest difference between em seems to be how high it floats, and longevity.