

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Fly Line Preferences

Re: Fly Line Preferences

Author: : krayfish

Date: : 2012/6/5 10:16:11

URL:

I was fishing a small cdc caddis pupa on the Tully. I'm no Steve Rajeff but am a fairly good caster (able to curve casts, tuck cast, check cast or throw it 65-70'). I don't think I've thrown a tailing loop since my first year of fly fishing. While false casting, the loop was super tight but when I tried to present the fly, slop. It looked to be a huge loop and the fly didn't want to get away from the end of the fly line. I was able to fish by checking the cast high but wasn't pleased with the way the line worked. I guess it wouldn't hurt to cut off the 4 year old leader that I recycled, install a new leader and give it a shot. I'm taking the 3wt to the Catskill JAM this week. If we get use of the driftboat, I want to try and catch one on a 3wt this year.