Thanks for the encouragement! I guess that I am trying to force the woolly bugger issue instead of using a pattern that is best suited for the current steam conditions.

I had some very fortunate beginners luck on the Codorus this past April/May - I caught/released a lot of nice browns using dry flies...it was almost to easy. Now nothing... What has changed so much in that period of time?

I have never nymphed before and want to give it a try - any suggestions?

Also, I did try a few terrestrials (foam ant and chernobyl ant) without having much luck. Should I fish terrestrials just like a dry fly?
