

---

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Fly Line Preferences

Re: Fly Line Preferences

Author: : afishinado

Date: : 2012/6/7 10:47:01

URL:

Quote:

shortrod wrote:

dryflyguy brings up a good point here:

"I still prefer DT lines - although it's getting a little hard to find them lately."

I also prefer DT lines and have to search around to find them. I prefer DT lines because I have no use for the advantage WF lines (the ability to shoot farther). I do have a use for the advantages of DT lines.

There is no doubt that the line manufacturers would prefer you bought WF lines.

My question to those of you that buy WF lines is, why would you go along with the line manufacturers plot to have you buy twice as many lines over the course of your career than is needed?

Not everyone fishes with a shortrod....lol.

No biggie, either one on a really small stream. But on a medium sized stream or larger, being able to shoot line is important to me, even if the casts aren't really that long.

Pick up > false cast one time > and shoot. (add a haul for longer casts)

Easy, efficient, and accurate.

BTW, WF outsells DT more than 20 to 1 in my experience. That's why it's so hard to find.