Whats the states plan to combat this stuff?

What are it's options?

1. Angler education, try to get people to wash stuff properly, etc.
2. Outlaw the most likely vectors, like felts.
3. Outlaw progressively less likely vectors.

It's a sucky situation. #1 is a no brainer. #'s 2 and 3 are and should be considered, but they will only slow the progress. At this point, it's a virtual certainty that in time, all streams will be exposed to it, and it's just yet to be seen where it takes and where the damage will be most severe.
