Irony of it all, to me, is the Republican mantra is to give back the government to the people by allowing the local government to make their own choices. Get the feds and states out of our business! Yet in this case, when the greenbacks are flashed, local communities have no power to choose if the nattie gas is drilled and compressed and piped through their own back yards.

I guess that would be irony if that is what the small government wing of the republican party actually was for. But it's not fed/state gov vs. municipal gov, it's fed gov vs. state gov. If this stance seems confusing, read the constitution, it's all laid out in there.
