

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Gloves

Re: Gloves

Author: : Maurice

Date: : 2007/1/18 19:45:33

URL:

Quote:

live2fish wrote:

Maurice wrote;

"A few years ago when I shortened one of my fingers by an inch, I found that it didn't like the cold very much, I was traumatized that I may not be able to fish in winter. I realized getting it wet was the issue. so I put a pair of latex gloves on under the rag wools, waa lah, no cold fingies."

Question: Do your hands sweat inside the latex?

I have a similiar problem as yours. Twenty years ago I took a finger tip off, which they reattached. That is the first one to get cold. But hasn't stopped me from fishing though. Not worried about keeping the finger dry just warm. Ten degree drop in temperture during the summer I can feel it in the finger tip. Always looking for a way to keep it warm.

My finger was reattached too, it is partially numb on the tip like yours. But it doesn't get any colder than any others. I think keeping the cold water off the tips of your fingers works in freezing or below freezing weather. And, Keeping the wind off helps too. The ragg wool still warms the hand which helps the extremeties.

Give it a try...cannot hurt.

Maurice