Lastly, quite a few local boys, maybe because the smaller streams have all but dried up, have been out on the river filling their stringers of late: if you see these guys with more fish than they are allowed, report them. Regs on the Middle Yough are two over fourteen inches.

I thought this sort of thing waned over the last 15 to 20 years. Apparently not. Poaching and overkill used to be the way it always was in the waters around there. (The one story I always tell is the day I found blasting caps and no fish in one of the local streams in the area.) Don't they recognized a valuable resource when they see one. I suspect they're beyond help... but we need to do a better job teaching the kids.
