John,
Thanks for the report.

It is indeed a good wading section. I've fished it a few times with Afishinado and usually done well. I'd guess the water temps, by this afternoon, were probably in the mid 80s.

With respect to the poor fishing, I suppose it's worth remembering that smallies are "wild fish" and, just like wild trout streams, bass rivers can turn off and on. One day yuh slay 'em, the next day it's as if there are no fish in the river.

Don't listen to the oft made claim that you can "always" catch huge numbers of smallies or - my personal pet-peeve - that "hundred fish days are common" on the Susquehanna or any other PA river. Sure, you can have great days.....but it isn't always great.
