

Subject: : Gear Talk

Topic: : Choosing a quality mid level reel

Re: Choosing a quality mid level reel

Author: : The_Sasquatch

Date: : 2012/7/6 12:04:20

URL:

The fact of the matter is, I simply can't afford top of the line stuff. Hell, I have a hard time affording "mid level" stuff. It takes me half a year to save up for a $300 LL Bean combo. The Allen rod I won at the jam is probably the most "ritzy" piece of equipment I own, and its a $179 rod. Otherwise I'm fishin' with my Cortland GRF 1000 that I bought when I was 17 years old from the corner store in Oleona PA w/ an Okuma SLV reel that I got for free.

Part of my attraction to glass is that I can buy a nice Fenwick relatively inexpensively, pair it with a Medalist for next to nothing, and people think my gear is awesome 😊