I noticed the same thing back in mid-May. Was fishing a wild trout stream in northern Centre, and had to drive out a ridge past two big sites and park less than a quarter-mile from the closest one. I could smell whatever that stench is as I approached the first one, and it didn't subside until I started to hike down into the valley. It also gave me a bit of a headache and slight burning in the nostrils. The fishing was still exceptional... for now...
