

---

Subject: : Stream Reports

Topic: : Tulpehocken Creek, Berks County?, 7/3/2012

Re: Tulpehocken Creek, Berks County?, 7/3/2012

Author: : pcray1231

Date: : 2012/7/10 15:42:13

URL:

Mike, the OP posted this on July 4. And all in all, he did pretty well, at least as summertime fishing on larger streams goes. A good 2 weeks after the current DH date.

If the DH date were moved up to memorial day, would he have done as well? I don't know the degree to which it would harm the fishing, but it certainly wouldn't help.

You seem to be of the opinion that allowing fish to die due to water temps and predation should be avoided. That's the part I respectfully disagree with. The goal is to hold onto a decent fishery as long as possible into the summer.

A fish that gets caught 4 times and then dies due to warm water is MORE valuable than a fish that gets caught twice and harvested before water temps do it in.