

---

Subject: : Warm Water & Salt Water Fly-Fishing

Topic: : LM Bass go to fly?

Re: LM Bass go to fly?

Author: : RLeeP

Date: : 2012/7/11 18:19:34

URL:

>>That's just heavy mono tied in at the butt, looped around the point, then tied back in at the head?>.

Not just heavy. Stiff. What is called "hard" mono.

The best stuff I've found is from Mason, a small (but pretty old) company in Michigan. It comes in 10 yard coils for a couple bucks.

http://www.masontackle.com/store/index.php?l=product\_detail&p=125

A fair number of shops carry it, especially online. So, its pretty east to find or you can order direct from Mason.

I generally use either 20 or 25 lb. test for weed guards. The stuff is so stiff you probably don't want to go any heavier than that. Its stiff to the point that above a certain thickness, it has a tendency to reduce hookups with fish (bass anyway, I don't imagine it matters much to pike or muskies) as well as deter fouling by weeds.