Some of the sentiments on here speak to me. If you genuinely enjoy it, I think that's great. But I'm always suspicious of things that come across as fad-ish. Maybe even hold myself back on some good stuff now n then just because I'm too stubborn to try it out for that reason. Tenkara fits into this category.

Try it you might like it. Like I said earlier it is a fun way to fish, but my Tenkara rod will not replace my other flyrods. What I question are fellas who bad mouth Tenkara flyfishing who have not tried it. They should withhold judgement until they experience it.
