This is the worst experience for me. I've recently gotten into dry fly fishing. I haven't caught a trout on a dry fly yet, and I hope to do so soon. I've decided to switch to dry fly fishing from nymphing because dry flies have are a more exhilarating experience if you ask me. I've gone out with an ant, and lately, I've gotten a lot of fish coming up to eat my fly, but I cannot set the hook! I went out a few days ago, first cast with an ant, and a fish comes up for it, but I pull with no fish. So I've decided to try and wait a little longer for the fish to fully inhale the fly before I pull, but that's a tough thing to do :D Once you see the fish, instinct says to PULL. Even though it's a frustrating experience, I'm gonna keep on trying 'til I pull one in :)
