Let's get some perspective. Look at the number of views that this post has gotten - 617 or something last time I looked. I'll bet at least half of those are people checking back to see what the new replies say (if not more). I know I'll check posts as new replies come in. So now we're down to less than 300 people. Of those, I'll bet more than half aren't even from the western PA area. So now we're down to 150 or so people that might actually consider going to the stream.

Of those 150 - how many actually will?

Ask yourself how often you read a post and rush out to that stream.

The point is any post on this site isn't going to cause a stampede. Especially when it's about an already well known area.

I enjoyed the post - it's nice to know somebody is out there fishing when I can't be.
