What i've learned over the years is wait until the trout is on his way back down after you see it take the fly. Patience is hard to come by at that moment, because of visual.

My problem is, what I understand, if they take (took) they will reject it fairly quickly. Its that small window of time that causes me to want to hook it right away. Those WW fish just snap at it and its hooked. Trying to get that 'touch' is what I have to figure out, amongst other things 😊
