Pressured trout will reject the fly at the last minute, especially during a trico spinner fall. A long tippet is a must and it should be 7X. Often they will be keyed in on either the males early, or the females later. Saturday was a bit different, there were plenty of bugs in the air, but not many on the water. I'm not sure why, but it is probably related to the air temperature. It was in the 70's when I left the house at 530 am, usually trout will want it somewhat cooler during a trico spinner fall.
