Yeah, I think pcray hit the nail on the head with what I had in mind...

Meet at a central location, enjoy some chatting/BSing/eating/instruction/etc then break down into smaller 3 or 4 person groups to do some fishing. Meet back up at the central location in the evening.

As far as locations, I think general areas are more what I'm looking to consider, as opposed to individual streams. The three I mentioned have enough good options that several groups could go out and explore different streams, without encroaching on any streams that were shared to us by others. Again, always open to other suggestions too though.

As far as the Browns go...many of the streams I have in mind in these areas have Browns in them too. That's ok in my mind...it's more the remote, small stream experience that matters IMO.
