

Subject: : Fly Fishing Events and Meet-ups

Topic: : Newbie Brookie Expedition/Jam?

Re: Newbie Brookie Expedition/Jam?

Author: : joseywales

Date: : 2012/7/31 15:24:49

URL:

Foxgap, yes my brother and I were not talking specifically brookie.

However, is your last post perhaps a reason to lean more toward trout, being most newbies don't have 6.5" rods??? I don't want to sway the group either way, as I am fortunate to have some experienced anglers from whom i can fish locally.

pcray, I here what you're saying and that would be different that last week at the LL. That said, it might be better in some ways.

Last week, some newbies had onstream instruction. I had two ducks with me, neither of which knew more about FFing than I. However, they also seemed to catch whatever they were after...I did not.

For me, the after fishing was the most beneficial, as experienced anglers gathered to discuss leaders/tippets and of course Chaz and Dave providing casting advice.

Perhaps this outing is more onstream and that could work well and then meet as a group to eat, etc.