

Subject: : Fly Fishing Events and Meet-ups

Topic: : Newbie Brookie Expedition/Jam?

Re: Newbie Brookie Expedition/Jam?

Author: : Chaz

Date: : 2012/7/31 20:20:18

URL:

The type of fishing that is brookies fishing is not conducive to a large group of anglers. However, if you were to go to NC PA for a weekend it could be done because there are hundreds of brookies streams. If it was done at Petticoat Junction it would be ideal. You have Cedar Run right there, Babb Creek nearby, Slate Run, and all the tributaries of all of those streams and many others.

Add to that a short trip to Kettle or YWC and you all can spread out sufficiently to make it a fun trip. I'd be happy to attend and lead a group.

There are many brookies streams that are much larger than 8 to 10 feet wide. All the streams I mentioned are larger than that for instance. But you do need a shorter rod that will cast into tight places no matter where you fish in NC PA. I have extra rods that I can bring so not having a rod is not necessarily an issue.