+1...I'd say 3 per stream is ideal, one leader, 2 Newbies, but 4 would work if need be. Any more, although possible, is just simply impractical.

The amount of interest we get next Spring will affect location. For a fairly small group, say 12 anglers total or less (so 3 or 4 groups out on different streams), there's a couple areas in the Poconos that would probably work ok.

Any more than that though and you probably need to move to the State College area, or even better, NC PA where there are more quality (and accessible) streams to spread out and send groups out on.

In any case, I think NC PA is the place to do this sort of thing...lots of public land, lots of the classic high gradient tiny Brookie streams, and even a few not so tiny ones. Once we set up a date in the Spring, and see who's interested we can put it up to a vote and go from there. I can tell ya now though, my vote will be for NC!
