My sons waders that are leaking are Hodgemans, not Orvis. Mine are leaking too now and they are Guide Series. The seam problem is with lots of waders that's why the companies are changing the design. Simm's has changed their design too.

I would be miffed if I had to wait that long for a pair of waders to be fixed during the season.

My son had a problem with his Korkers but at least they offered to replace them. Since he couldn't be without a pair during the shipment period I put the replacement pair on my credit card which they credited as soon as we returned the broken pair.

I don't like to shop online for the very reason you stated. Yes they stand by the product but if you have to jump through hoops for something that is defective, it's like not having a warranty at all. That's why I like the store. They have to look at you very sad face in person. Good luck with your waders.
