I echo Dave's comments but will add:

The stream needs to be studied far more than it already has been before anyone should be making any claims.

-It is possible many fishes moved into the restored area from up and downstream areas.

-Is this population burst an unnatural condition that sometimes happens after a restoration?

-Will the size and population of brookies grow with the absence of rainbows?

-Will future restorations have the same effect on the population structure of the trout?

These are just a few of many questions that should be answered.

Its too early to go jumping the gun on anything.

I sent my concerns and comments anyway.
