DGC,

great post..kinda nice that a few of these mentioned are located in the eastern part of the state,Francis Walter Dam { Lehigh River}, Beltzville Dam {Pohopoco a trib of the mighty Lehigh river},Lake Wallenpaupack Dam{Lackawaxen River a trib of the Delaware},and even the Cannonsville Dam { West Branch of the Delaware river}.

Imho theres still a need for better habitat restoration,company like CFI Global Fisheries does some really amazing stuff to make good fisheries even better...heres a link check it out:

i have fished a few of these projects before an after they have done work on em out west.Man the places i have fished were good but man o man they were really good when they finished.

All the cold water in the world wont do you no good unless you have the invertabrates an habiat to increase better fish holding lies.

I cant imagine what the Raystown Dam /Juniata would be like if they got it cold like the Delaware or the Pohopoco.....some folks would never have to leave central pa,between the spring creeks/limestoners/freestoners..and a great Tailwater?sheesh
