Wish they would look at the Allegehny res.

Yeah. There's obviously questions there about what the needs of the power station are. It's gonna be pulling water anytime the grid needs it, and I don't think we're gonna have much say over that. And when they get that thing running, they pretty much totally shut down the dam outflows and send it ALL through the generator.

I'm just not close enough to the situation to know details on whether there's any adjustment that could be made. It's not listed in the candidate list. It already IS a tailwater trout fishery. But I think it could be perhaps improved, and the cold water extend much further downstream.

Yes, I think it could potentially rival the White River in Arkansas. It's huge. The lake is huge too and has lots of cold water. It has good fish structure. And there's a ridiculous forage base rivaling lake Erie.
