Dry fly fishing can go wrong in many different ways, especially to fish who are easily spooked. So I was wondering if there are things that help keep a dry fly presentable, so that fish don't run when it hits the water. How to keep your fly line from smacking the water and scaring fish from the noise, and what do do beforehand to prepare for dry fly fishing. In conclusion, how to make easily spooked fish sip your dry flies. How to cast, where to cast, what to look for.

Any help would be great :)
