

Subject: : Conservation

Topic: : An alternative to hydro fracking?

Re: An alternative to hydro fracking?

Author: : franklin

Date: : 2012/8/13 7:57:33

URL:

Quote:

tomgamber wrote:

When I lived Boise 20 years ago they had all the buses on natural gas. There is no excuse that we are not driving nat gas vehicles....except the oil lobby.

It's more of a chicken and egg issue. Cars don't sell because there are few to no places to fuel up. Gas stations aren't investing because there isn't a large market of cars. The infrastructure investment is huge so it's not going to happen overnight.

Most large oil companies are also in the natural gas business. They would profit either way. Are you aware of specific government rules or regulations that restrict autos from using natural gas or propane in favor of gasoline?