

Subject: : Fly Fishing Locations

Topic: : Floating the Conestoga River

Re: Floating the Conestoga River

Author: : salvelinusfontinalis

Date: : 2012/8/14 7:25:47

URL:

Yes.

The Conestoga River is not a river. First you must understand this. Its a big creek really and like a big creek, its shallow in many areas. Anyone planning to float the river should avoid deep well boats. Your gonna want something that can skim the surface.

Next I would get the SEPA region guide brochure. You can get them a Commission office or go to this link. The publications are free and handy. The Conestoga is in the SEPA one and will show you were all the boat launches and dams are. The upper Conestoga gets tricky and it has many dams along the old farms.

Good Luck! I would love to hear how you make out!