I have mixed emotions on Stream Reports. I enjoy reading about folks outings especially when I could'nt get out myself. I get as much out of what happened to folks (like them catching bats or posion ivy, taking wrong turns etc...) as I do about people's catches or successes.

(agree with ezpickens post from above) Heard alot about Muddy,Valley,Mountian Creeks etc... but I have never thought I was even close to jumping in the car and driving 3-4 hours to fish somewhere.

The report is from some guy using a spin rod in a DHALO area. If there was that many people there- good for the rest of us on open water or class A waters. Let the lemmings go there. As Will Farrell says "More for me and you".

It is funny that your last post was publically asking for information on the Loyalhanna back in November after the DHALO area was stocked. If it was that big a deal- you would have thought you would PM someone.

Not saying your right or wrong just observations of mine.
