Just fish the pothole behind the rental cottage closest to the Coast Guard Station.

That's, umm, MY rental cottage. That very one. lol. Will be there Monday-Friday. I liked the location because I thought maybe I could fish during baby naps, and be in shouting distance for when I'm needed.

Tim, how recently have you been there? I've NEVER been there, but have been researching fishing reports and pictures and so forth.

As I told Sandfly, a pothole similar to what you're describing is gone. Used to be called bubble gum beach, a little sandy cove with swirling deep waters against the coast guard bulkhead wall, right behind the cottages. The Army Corps made a rock wall straight up to the coast guard bulkhead, cutting off that little cove in the process. They also dredged the channel out in the middle and dumped the material behind and in front of the new wall, trying to eliminate that hole and stabilize the bank. The coast guard wall there had apparantly collapsed, and they rebuilt it and were trying to "remedy" the swirling waters which caused it.

But there's still a rock wall to fish off of right out the door.
