Regarding the redone wall, it doesn't go to the "end" of the bulkhead, there's still a wall perpendicular to shore. But the rock wall does go straight to the bulkhead, in a straight line, cutting off the little circular cove and there's nowhere where sand goes straight to water. I don't know how recently it was done so it's possible if you were there last year it hasn't changed. Here's a picture I found on a blog. I know it shows the wrong side of the wall, but maybe you can tell if it has changed since you were there. My impression was that there was a sandy beach there in the relatively recent past.
